

User Flow

A user flow is a visual representation of the steps a user takes to achieve a specific goal within a product or service. It maps out the user's journey from the entry point through different interactions until the final outcome, helping designers optimize usability and create smoother experiences.

